COVID-19 RESPONSE FUND

In 2020, to proactively address the health and economic impact of COVID-19 on our neighbors, Mayor John Cooper convened a group of philanthropic, government and business partners to form a COVID-19 Response Fund, which rapidly deployed resources to community-based organizations, getting dollars to where they were needed most. Housed at United Way and chaired by former Senator Dr. Bill Frist, founder of NashvilleHealth, the COVID-19 Response Fund focused its initial allocations on helping our neighbors receive the assistance they needed to stay in their homes and keep food on the table. Together, we raised more than $5 million, thanks to generous corporate, philanthropic and community gifts. We worked quickly to form a Response Committee that represented the community. The committee was tasked with guiding and overseeing the Fund and created an online application process through which community-based organizations applied for funding.

Total raised: $5,209,875

- Total allocations: $5,182,049
- Staffing support: $19,500
- Credit card fees: $10,117

Total investment into the community: $5,211,666

Balance: ($1,791)

These dollar amounts and agencies are up to date. Agencies that received grant funding were required to account for their expenditures and report on the impact of the services funded.
